

Chris Rabb

Photo Credit: Susan Beard Design

Chris Rabb is a consultant, social commentator and entrepreneur.

He has been featured in or written for C-SPAN, The Wall Street Journal, New York Newsday, The Chicago Tribune, Mother Jones, Colorlines, In These Times, and other publications. He is also a contributing editor at various web publications and periodically blogs on Afro-Netizen.com, which he founded in 1999.

His consultancy, Visceral Ventures LLC, focuses on organizational effectiveness, new media strategy, and entrepreneurial advisory services. His practice centers on effective and innovative means of engaging, empowering and organizing consumers, voters, and other constituencies primarily within African-American communities.

A former stand-up comedian and trained improvisational performer, he has spoken and performed at universities, conferences and other venues all across the U.S. He is a graduate of Yale College and received an M.S. in Organizational Dynamics from the University of Pennsylvania.

He is a 2001 recipient of the American Marshall Memorial Fellowship and is active in a number of local and national civic organization. He is a member of the Progressive Communicators Network, the Media Consortium, National Association of Black Journalists and the Association of Professional Genealogists.

A native of Chicago, Mr. Rabb lives in Philadelphia with his wife, Prof. Imani Perry, and sons, Freeman Diallo and Issa.

Value to Clients:

- ★ Organizational effectiveness
- ★ Decision-making
- ★ Creative thinking/problem-solving
- ★ Team-building/collaborative learning
- ★ Personal productivity
- ★ Interpersonal communications
- ★ Use of new media
- ★ Diversity

To inquire about speaking engagements . . .

866.359.2635

OR

speaking@chrisrabb.com